

BRAZIL'S NATIONAL FLOWER

Cattleya Labiata is the National Flower of Brazil. It is commonly known as Cattleya Orchid. Some parts of Brazil consider it as Corsage Orchid. It is also called 'Queen of Orchids', 'Crimson Cattleya', or Ruby-Lipped Cattleya.

Brazil is the single largest flower cultivating country in the world, and famous for the flowers with extraordinary color, vibrant, fragrant, lively-ness and beauties.

Because of its lively colors, resilience, and endurance, Cattleya Orchid was titled as Brazil's National Flower. This beautiful orchid reflects the spirit of Brazil.
